The River Parrett Trail

The River Parrett Trail - a 50-mile walking route stretching from Chedington in Dorset through South Somerset, across the levels and moors to the edge of the Bristol Channel at Steart.

What is the Trail Watchers scheme?

The Trail Watchers scheme provides an opportunity for members of the public to volunteer to help look after the River Parrett Trail. By providing extra help on the ground you can make sure that the paths which make up the Trail are well-maintained and free from problems.

By joining this scheme you will play an active role in looking after a small section of the trail and we hope you will gain personal satisfaction and enjoyment in participating in the project. You will also be helping others to continue to enjoy the natural beauty of the countryside.

How can I help?

By becoming a Trail Watcher you volunteer to walk a stretch of the Trail within your locality three or four times a year.

Once registered you will be provided with a support pack and further guidance. Should you encounter any obstructions such as faulty gates or stiles all you need to do is report these in on forms provided.

The River Parrett Trail provides an opportunity for people to explore fascinating and beautiful countryside and helps attract visitors into rural communities. This is your chance to be a part of it.

Anything else?

The scheme is available to groups as well as individuals. Members will not be asked to approach landowners or do any physical works.
